UDINE, the history of the city

The city lies not far from a wide range of morainic hills, on the international road that links Southern Europe to North-Eastern Europe.

Its origins are very ancient but it has been deeply shaped since 1420, together the whole Friuli, under the dominion of the Republic of Venice lasted more than three centuries.

During the First World War (1915 – 1918), it was the seat of the Comando Supremo Italiano (Italian Military Command).

It is a cosy sitting room-city, loved by famous painter Gianbattista Tiepolo, who came to live here several times.

They say that the hill of the Castle of Udine was raised with the earth carried in the helmets of Attila's soldiers, to allow this fierce warrior to enjoy the scene of Aquileia on fire from above.

Udine enters history only in 983, the year in which Emperor Ottone II of Germany donated to the Patriarch of Aquileia the Castle of Udine. The place was really inhabited since ancient times but it did not cover strategic importance neither in Roman age and not even during the Lombard domination.

The city had a role of great importance in the patriarchal state of Aquileia starting from the 13th century, when Patriarch Bertoldo from Andechs transferred the patriarchal seat from Cividale to Udine and set up a permanent market that attracted many people.

Since then, the city developed little by little. From the castle, which was surrounded by a moat and by a first circle of walls that protected the few inhabitants, it started to extend to the area below, having 6000 inhabitants at the end of the century and becoming Friuli's most populous city.

In 1420 the city fell under the rule of Venice, that chose it as the residence of the "Venetian lieutenant" in the Country of Friuli. It opposed the Turk's raids at the end of the fifteenth century and in 1511 it suffered a strong earthquake that destroyed it almost completely.

Thanks to nearly four centuries under the rule of the Serenissima Republic of Venice, the city was enriched with many wonderful palaces and with remarkable still visible works of art.

In 1797 Friuli was occupied by Napoleon's troops and, after the Treaty of Campo Formio, it fell under the rule of Austria that, however, defeated several times by the French, took permanent possession of it only in 1813. After the failure of the rebellions of 1848, in October 1866 the city and part of the province was annexed to the Reign of Italy.

During the First World War, owing to the important role it played, Udine was appointed "Capital of the First World War".

In 1963 the city and the province came to constitute with Trieste, Gorizia and Pordenone the Region under Special statutes (conferring local autonomy), Friuli Venezia Giulia.

The Linguistic Centre (CLA) of the University of Udine in cooperation with the International Relations and Mobility Office - International Student Service, organises various Italian courses for students studying at the University through International mobility programmes such as Erasmus+.

There are 2 main types of courses:

- Intensive courses held at the beginning of the academic year.

These courses are aimed at providing students, with little or intermediate knowledge of Italian, with a little initial 'extra help', so that they have less problems following their lectures from the very beginning.

- Semester courses held both in the 1st & 2nd semesters - to provide year-round linguistic support.

These courses cater for all levels of Italian. They are held after the Intensive course to enable the students who have done this course to have continual linguistic support, and for the more advanced students to improve upon their existing knowledge.

Before joining the courses the students must do both a written and an oral test to check their level. At the end of the courses the students who have attended regularly will receive an Attendance certificate.

The students who successfully pass the final test will receive an additional Progress certificate.

N.B.: PLEASE NOTE THAT THESE COURSES DO NOT PROVIDE ECTS CREDITS.

The students have free access to the Multimedia Labour for individual study:

- Italian texts
- the textbooks recommended for each course
- didactic CD ROMs
- Italian video and audio cassettes
- Internet access.
